DETAILED ACTION

This Office action is in response to the preliminary amendment filed on 1/26/2005.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 12-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Cardelli et al. (EP 1010867).

Regarding claim 12: Cardelli discloses a method for regulating a d.c. converter for at least two electromagnetic valves of an internal combustion engine (see figure, numeral 16; abstract), the method comprising: supplying each of the at least two electromagnetic valves with a current that is generated by the d.c. converter (see figure); determining when a total current supplied to the at least two electromagnetic valves constitutes a high load for the d.c. converter; and if a high load is determined, adapting the d.c. converter for processing of the high load (see paragraph 0023).

Regarding claim 13: Cardelli discloses the current supplied to each of the at least two electromagnetic valves is determined as a function of a triggering provided for an output stage upstream from the at least two electromagnetic valves (see figure).

Regarding claim 14: Cardelli discloses the high load for the d.c. converter is derived from overlapping currents of the at least two electromagnetic valves (see figure).

Regarding claim 15: Cardelli discloses adaptation of the d.c. converter includes increasing an output voltage of the d.c. converter in the case of a high load (see paragraphs 0023;0015).

Regarding claim 16: Cardelli discloses the output voltage is regulated with reference to a setpoint value, and wherein the setpoint value is increased (see paragraphs 0015,0020).

Regarding claim 17: Cardelli discloses an output power of the d.c. converter is increased in the case of a high load (see paragraph 0015,0020,0023).

Regarding claim 18: Cardelli discloses an increase in an output voltage of the d.c. converter is performed prior to an occurrence of the high load (see paragraph 0020).

Regarding claim 19: Cardelli discloses the increase in the output voltage is terminated upon termination of the high load state (see paragraph 0023).

Regarding claim 20: Cardelli discloses a computer-readable storage medium for storing computer program having instructions for controlling, when the program is executed by a computer (see figure), a method comprising: supplying each of the at least two electromagnetic valves with a current that is generated by the d.c. converter (see numeral 16); determining when a total current supplied to the at least two electromagnetic valves constitutes a high load for the d.c. converter, and if a high load is determined, adapting the d.c. converter for processing of the high load (see paragraph 0023).

Regarding claim 21: Cardelli discloses a device for regulating a d.c. converter for at least two electromagnetic valves of an internal combustion engine in a motor vehicle (see numeral 16), a current generated by the d.c. converter being supplied to each of the at least tow electromagnetic valves (see figure), the device comprising: a control unit configured to determine when a total current supplied to the at least two electromagnetic valves represents a high load for the d.c. converter, wherein the control unit regulates the d.c. converter for optimal processing of the high load (see paragraph 0023).

Conclusion

3. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Yani et al. (5,915,347) discloses DC converter that constitutes voltage increasing means.
